Dear Karen,

My husband and I were camping with our family this past week. It is a trip we look forward to every year. The solitude of having just our family and a few close friends together for a week out in nature is heaven on earth for me. While there, I was faced with an ugly truth, I'm not as nice as I think I am. Let me share a bit more. Think about those surveys we take from time to time to learn more about our personality types. What I faced out in the woods could have been a question on one of those surveys.

You are camping out in a remote area and another party moves into your camp while you are out fishing. They drove 5 hours to get there and they are exhausted. There are no other campsites left. There is plenty of room on your campsite for the other party but you really don't want to share your supplies, your campfire, and your personal space. Do you:

- a) Let them stay but set boundaries.
- b) Ask them to leave.

If you are like me, you would have answered 'a' to this survey question. We are nice people.

Unfortunately, I found out I am really not that nice because not only did I ask them to leave, when they refused, I asked them to stop talking to me and I went directly to the nearest mountaintop to get cell service and called the management. The management agreed to drive out there and ask them to leave first thing in the morning. Which meant the squatters would be there for the night. They kept their distance and we didn't see hide nor hair of them. By the time the calvary arrived the next morning to evict them, sanity returned to me and I apologized for making the guy drive all the way out here but had decided the other campers could stay as long the group agreed to certain boundaries.

As I sit here this morning writing, listening to the rush of the river and the rustle of leaves and relishing the fact that the uninvited guests are now gone... I hear a new group driving up. I will go out to greet them later this morning and offer a cold drink and a warm smile. I don't know how long they plan to stay in our 'space'. I hope just for the day. Honestly, I'm just grateful that God sent another chance for me to get it right!

Joyfully,

Step Three:

Leadership Training Opportunity

Gen. Colin Powel, Bill Hybels, Liz Wiseman... along with 11 other world changing global leaders and authors will be speaking together next week (Aug 8-9).... and you are invited!!

Many Chicktime volunteers and leaders are registered to attend satellite locations hosting the Global Leadership Summit. There are still many spots available at locations throughout the country. The conference is open to all (men and women in business or ministry) and we HIGHLY encourage you to attend if at all possible! There is a registration fee and registration is through their website. Chicktime is not a host, we just love this Conference and highly recommend it to anyone wanting to grow as a leader (or human being).

For more information to this highly recommended event visit: Global Leadership Summit

"Often it's the deepest pain which empowers you to grow into your highest self" – Karen Salmansohn

When we experience hard times in life, we have two clear paths to choose from. We can stagger in the darkness, the depression, the sadness, and the hardship. Or we can decide to take the negative and turn it in to a positive!

Those who know me will be the first to tell you that I do my fair share of "wallowing" when going through hardships. This is normal after experiencing a difficult phase in life.

Read our short but comprehensive book

Step Four:

Review the Chicktime Training Manual

Step Five:

Email Lori at info@chicktime.com to set up an appointment to begin your training

PLEASE complete all steps above before contacting us to set up a training appointment. All the tools are provided for you to understand the commitment and responsibilities to make your decision... but you must read them! :-)
